Bringing together the best in print and digital for an enhanced reading and learning experience.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9, 2025 – Follett Content, a leading children’s and young adult book provider, and Sora, the award-winning student reading app by OverDrive, today announced a sales collaboration that unites two trusted leaders in PreK-12 reading and learning. The partnership will provide an improved experience for readers by delivering digital content to students via the Sora app.

Librarians have long relied on Follett Content for trusted, on-hand inventory to help them find and access the content their communities need. Increasingly, schools are providing digital content as an important component of the reading and learning experience, and Sora has continued to support student literacy anytime, anywhere through the world’s largest catalog of digital books. Together, the organizations support the essential goal of connecting every student with engaging, accessible reading materials in the format that works best for them.

As an avid audiobook listener, Britten Follett, CEO of Follett Content, knows first-hand the benefits this will bring to educators, librarians, and readers. “I have to be a top audiobook listener for my #BritReads reading journey and now I’m thrilled to be a partner to further support readers everywhere! This collaboration will bring seamless digital content discovery, enabling librarians to focus more on reader engagement.”

“Sora and Follett Content share a deep commitment to empowering students with equitable access to high-quality reading materials,” said Renee Davenport, VP Education for Sora. “By bringing together Follett Content’s respected resources with the digital reading experience in Sora, we’re giving educators and librarians more ways to meet readers where they are. This partnership streamlines their workflow, strengthens their collections, and ultimately supports the goal we care about most — helping every student discover a love of reading.”

Follett Content and Sora share a commitment to improving student outcomes through multimodal learning. By bringing together print, ebooks, audiobooks, and readalongs, the partnership gives educators the flexibility to build collections that meet diverse learner needs and inspire a lifelong love of reading. Long term, this collaboration will enable discovery of select digital titles from Sora to be available in Titlewave – Follett’s online collection development, ordering, and analysis tool – helping educators and librarians more easily identify high-quality content for their schools.
